One year ago today: "Dr. Oetker's decision to eat garlic is, as you can well imagine, something very few people are able to do with absolute success, even with great care. However, Dr. Oetker, who thought the experiment would keep him busy in the kitchen for the whole summer, was quite disappointed to discover that in fact it only delayed the production of garlic for a few weeks only. It is true that if the weather conditions are bad, the garlic heads will keep growing for a while, until they get so big that they require quite some time and energy for harvesting. Normally, they would be harvested in full, but after so many weeks, the time was too short. However, Dr. Oetker's experiment proved that we are not yet able to pick the garlic we need just by opening a box of golden, fresh and crunchy garlic. We are also able to create this golden, fresh and crunchy garlic in a very short time." Yesterday afternoon: "It's official, there is no huge surplus of fresh garlic available in the world. Just one and a half hours ago, it was a euro per kilo. To put that into perspective, as we all know, the current price of a kilo of garlic is currently around 9.5 euros. This was mostly due to

System Requirements:

Please note: Due to the nature of the game, as a board game, it is highly recommended that you have a computer with a supported operating system and at least 2gb of RAM. Processor: The best recommendation is to use an Intel or AMD processor with SSE2 and SSE3 instructions enabled. RAM: 1gb recommended, though some games with low complexity may still run with less. Graphics: A minimum of 1gb RAM recommended. Disk Space: 10gb recommended, but that's just a rule
