(Reuters/Joshua Roberts) Activists will go to great lengths to ruin the lives of women and children in the name of “liberty.” Millennials understand what the “pro-life” philosophy really means. What they don’t understand is how bigots like them can walk away with a win. Let’s look at the historical record. Millennials are today’s reactionaries. This generation has not experienced the 1960s as a time of civil rights, anti-war, and sexual-liberty movements. Millennials in 1968 were too young to remember the Brown decision or even vote. They were too young to get arrested in protest or conscripted into the military. They grew up in a post-war America that welcomed the end of the Vietnam War, a time when youth protests were thankfully not only rare but, in many instances, ineffective. Millennials are generally bright, innovative, and idealistic. They are also isolated, caught up in their smartphones, and easily intimidated by older people. There are no movement organizations for young people in the GOP, unless you count the Tea Party. And so young people gravitate to the party that is happy to meet their need for community and outrage.
